

Title Page

The title page is required when writing in APA style. There is a professional title page and a student title page. The student title page should include the:

Title of the paper (centered and bold)

 Include an extra double space between the title and the name of the author.*

Name of each author of the paper

Affiliation for each author (the university)

Course number and name

Name of the instructor

Assignment due date

Abstract

An abstract is a summary of your paper that provides your reader with important elements of your paper. It typically includes the piece's and . It should not analyze results.

Student papers do not usually require an abstract — check with your professor to see if one is needed.

Consider writing the abstract after writing the paper as this will make it easier to summarize what you wrote, rather than what you think you will write about.

The abstract is on page two of your document and should be labeled " " centered and bolded on the first line of the page. This summary should:

Be words in length and should be double-spaced.

The abstract should be left-aligned with no indentation.

In-Text Citations

All information that is not common knowledge and is gathered from outside sources should be cited within your text. All citations are required to have the

If the quote is 40 words or longer, it should start on a new line and should be entirely indented half an inch from the left margin. Block quotes should not have quotation marks. You are still required to cite it by including the author(s), year of publication, and page or paragraph number.

Author (year) states that:

This is a quote that is forty words or longer, and it includes pertinent information to my research. When omitting information from the middle of a sentence ... these three dots called ellipses can be used to denote that information is missing. Information can be omitted so long as it does not change
